one of the three members of the panel, while emphasising that the Committee would work impartially.

This is contrary to the demand by farm unions, mainly from Punjab (with some fromaryana and west UP) who are demanding that the laws be scrapped.

The unions opposed to the central farm laws have, however, maintained that they would not appear before the panel and rather prefer to try to reach at solutions through discussing the issues with the government and continue with their protests till their core demands - repeal of laws ting held at NASC Complex at Pusa, Ghanwat, president of the Maharashtra-based farm outfit Shetkari Sanghatana, said the Committee is keen to have views of all concerned on the subject so that it can give suggestions which will definitely be in the interests of the farmers of India.

Agriculture economist and former chairman of the Commission for Agricultural Costs & Prices Ashok Gulati and former director for South Asia, International Food Policy Research Institute Pramod Joshi are other two members of the Committee.
